

Notes from Customer

- Good thinking of adding Landing Page so users would understand what the website is about. A well-designed landing page can be an effective tool for quickly conveying information about the website's purpose, products or services, and target audience. By providing this information upfront, users are more likely to engage with the website and explore its offerings.
- Looks of the website need to be improved, like the colors and texts. Colors evoke certain emotions and feelings in users, so it's important to keep colors that align with the website's brand identity and message. More features and better structures need to be added to make it look more modern and create a more user-friendly experience that is both visually appealing and functional.
- Logical structure of the posts and good navigation through the website. Navigation menus are clear and easy to understand, and placed in a consistent location across all pages.
- Posts page in navigation menu needs to be moved higher in priority to make it more recognizable and accessible. The rule is that most important pages should be placed at the top of the menu, with less important pages towards the bottom. The Posts page, which contains important and timely information, should be placed near the top of the menu so that users can quickly and easily access it.
- Great consistency with posts and pages to make information more recognizable. Consistent template across all posts or pages, website owners can ensure that the website has a cohesive look and feel.
